This 1827 housekeeping and cookery guide is an enhanced version of the popular compendium published a year earlier. Published in 1829 in Philadelphia, Mackenzie's Five Thousand Receipts in All the Useful and Domestic Arts was an unknown "American physician's" adaptation of a best-selling British reference book by Colin Mackenzie. The book is an all-encompassing miscellanea of household information specifically revised from its original British publication for use in the United States. Covering everything from gardening, metallurgy, and pickling and preserving to watercolors, medical cures, perfumery, brewing, and cooking, this early 19th century compendium was an essential guide for cooking and managing a household during this time period. With the extensive material covered, the tome was very well received in America, as was the original publication in the United Kingdom. Even though the work was first published nearly 200 years ago, the recipes and advice have proven to be relevant today—lip balms citing the book as the recipe source can be found on the Internet, as well as numerous blogs referring to the brewing section of the book. While recipes such as Acorn Coffee, Clove Cordial, and Elephant's Milk may only be of historical interest, Mackenzie's Five Thousand Receipts in All the Useful and Domestic Arts still has significance today beyond simple historical curiosity. This edition of Mackenzie's Five Thousand Receipts in All the Useful and Domestic Arts was reproduced by permission from the volume in the collection of the American Antiquarian Society, Worcester, Massachusetts. Founded in 1812 by Isaiah Thomas, a Revolutionary War patriot and successful printer and publisher, the society is a research library documenting the lives of Americans from the colonial era through 1876. The society collects, preserves, and makes available as complete a record as possible of the printed materials from the early American experience. The cookbook collection comprises approximately 1,100 volumes. Excerpt from The Finishers' Manual: Containing the Receipts of an Expert for Finishing the Bottoms of Boots and Shoes, as Well as Other Valuable Information In issuing this book to the trade we give to the reader the results of many years of practical and successful experiments. We have made the finishing of hemlock leather a thorough study and we take pleasure in commending to your consideration our various formulas which will give a clear, even finish on any kind of leather provided our directions are strictly carried out. Every shoe manufacturer or finisher knows the value of a clean, bright attractive finish on his goods. The formulas we offer have the thoroughly and successfully tested by the best known manufacturers and finishers in this country. The finisher will do well to remember that it is the individual skill of the workman in performing many apparently simple operations which renders those operations successful. When, therefore, a receipt is tried for the first time and is not thoroughly successful, the experimentalist should consider how far his own inexperience has contributed to the failure before he condemns the receipt. PREFACE. THE Author of this very practical treatise on Scotch Loch - Fishing desires clearly that it may be of use to all who had it. He does not pretend to have written anything new, but to have attempted to put what he has to say in as readable a form as possible. Everything in the way of the history and habits of fish has been studiously avoided, and technicalities have been used as sparingly as possible. The writing of this book has afforded him pleasure in his leisure moments, and that pleasure would be much increased if he knew that the perusal of it would create any bond of sympathy between himself and the angling community in general. This section is interleaved with blank sheets for the readers notes. The Author need hardly say that any suggestions addressed to the case of the publishers, will meet with consideration in a future edition. We do not pretend to write or enlarge upon a new subject.

Much has been said and written-and well said and written too on the art of fishing but loch-fishing has been rather looked upon as a second-rate performance, and to dispel this idea is one of the objects for which this present treatise has been written. Far be it from us to say anything against fishing, lawfully practised in any form but many pent up in our large towns will bear us out when we say that, on the whole, a days loch-fishing is the most convenient. One great matter is, that the loch-fisher is depend- ent on nothing but enough wind to curl the water, -and on a large loch it is very seldom that a dead calm prevails all day, -and can make his arrangements for a day, weeks beforehand whereas the stream- fisher is dependent for a good take on the state of the water and however pleasant and easy it may be for one living near the banks of a good trout stream or river, it is quite another matter to arrange for a days river-fishing, if one is looking forward to a holiday at a date some weeks ahead. Providence may favour the expectant angler with a good day, and the water in order but experience has taught most of us that the good days are in the minority, and that, as is the case with our rapid running streams, -such as many of our northern streams are, -the water is either too large or too small, unless, as previously remarked, you live near at hand, and can catch it at its best. A common belief in regard to loch-fishing is, that the tyro and the experienced angler have nearly the same chance in fishing, -the one from the stern and the other from the bow of the same boat. Of all the absurd beliefs as to loch-fishing, this is one of the most absurd. Try it. Give the tyro either end of the boat he likes give him a cast of ally flies he may fancy, or even a cast similar to those which a crack may be using and if he catches one for every three the other has, he may consider himself very lucky. Of course there are lochs where the fish are not abundant, and a beginner may come across as many as an older fisher but we speak of lochs where there are fish to be caught, and where each has a fair chance. Again, it is said that the boatman has as much to do with catching trout in a loch as the angler. Well, we don't deny that. In an untried loch it is necessary to have the guidance of a good boatman but the same argument holds good as to stream-fishing... Excerpt from The Cook and Housewife's Manual: Containing the Most Approved Modern Receipts for Making Soups, Gravies, Sauces, Ragouts, and All Made-Dishes, and for Pies, Puddings, Pickles, and Preserves, Also for Baking, Brewing, Making Home-Made Wines, Cordials, &c It would be unnecessary to introduce this volume, written on a subject of universal interest and acknowledged utility, with any prefatory remarks whatever, were it not conceived, that the novel attempt of endeavouring 'to conciliate the lovers of what is called light reading, and to gain their attention to that which they may consider a vulgar and unimportant art, might alarm those graver and more prudent persons, who think perhaps' justly, the subject discussed of that earnest nature, which accords ill with any thing fanciful or discursive; and who may thence conclude the petty details and display of internal machinery in the Work, idle, if not impertinent and out of place. These weighty objections can only be met by the assumption, that the main business of this manual has, in no respect whatever, suffered from an attempt to separate the culinary art from its fopperies and technicalities; and to render that branch of economy, in which the comfort and respectability of domestic life is so much involved, more attractive to the young housekeeper. Excerpt from The Hand-Book of Practical Receipts, of Every-Day Use: A Manual for the Chemist, Druggist, Medical Practitioner, Manufacturer, and Heads of Families

In the lapse of four years, science has made rapid advances and new discoveries, among which are included some improved processes for attaining results hitherto imperfectly obtained, - the composition of patent medicines, notes on various photographic processes, and a variety of new artistic and medical formulae. Some of the recipes and preparations are taken from trade formulae, which now appear in print for the first time. The editor trusts that these additions will increase the value of the work, and render it still more useful to the student, and the public generally, as a Hand-book of truly practical Recipes of every-day use.

The longer it is beat in the mortar the better it will eat and keep. Put it into small potting-cans, and cover them with plenty of clarified butter, which will afterwards be useful for frying meat, pie-crust, &c.--Game to be sent to distant places may be potted without cutting up the birds, and will keep good for a month. To dress Ox-Palates.--Clean and boil them till the skin will easily pull off, and either cut them into long slices and square bits, or merely divide them. Stew them very slowly in good gravy thickened with butter kneaded in browned flour, and season them with cayenne, minced shalot, or onion, and a large spoonful of catsup, or the pickle of walnuts, mushrooms, or even of onions, which is very good for such purposes. Obs--This we think the most suitable way of dressing palates; but they are often more expensively prepared, either by adding wine and mushrooms, or truffles and morels to the sauce, or by dressing them as a fricassee in white sauce.--See French Cookery for other excellent ways of dressing palates. Palates are very suitable to the dejeuner z lajournette, either served hot as kidneys, or pickled and cold. Beef-Steak with Cucumbers.--Pare and slice three large cucumbers, and as many onions. Fry them in butter, and when browned, add a half-pint of gravy. Beat and season some rump-steaks and fry them. Dish them in a very hot dish, and pour the cucumber-sauce over them. Obs.--This is a good dish for variety, with very little expense. To slew a Tongue.--Trim off the coarse part of the root, but leave on some of the soft fat. Rub the tongue with salt, sugar, and...
